

Are The Naadi Predictions More Amazing Than The Great Nostradamus?

Are the Naadi predictions more amazing than the Great Nostradamus?

The headline of this article may come as a surprise to many readers, as it has long been presumed that Nostradamus is the preeminent astrologer in the world. However, there is now a new contender on the scene: the Naadi astrologer. While some may view this individual as merely boasting and self-promoting, Wing Commander Shashikant Oak has been touting Naadi astrology predictions for several years due to their remarkable and astonishing achievements. Nevertheless, it is not appropriate for him to belittle Nostradamus' towering reputation with such vitriol. Why stoop to mud-slinging?

I will leave it up to readers of this article to decide whether I am exaggerating about Naadi astrology or if its merits are indeed extraordinary when compared side-by-side with other methods of prediction - without any intention of diminishing Nostradamus or other astrologers' abilities in any way. After all, each approach may have its own distinct methodology and unique strengths.

September 11, 2001 is an unforgettable day in the annals of human history. On that fateful day, terrorists attacked the twin towers of the World Trade Centre in New York and the Pentagon - a symbol of American government might. Their actions were emblematic of their extremist ideology which held society hostage to their political, economic, social and religious demands. However, there are limits to how much civilized societies can tolerate such acts of terror. Once these thresholds are transgressed, it becomes inevitable to declare war on terrorism. The events of September 11th brought this stark reality home to nations around the world.

Naturally, Nostradamus' ability to foresee such an event became a topic for discussion across all media outlets immediately following its occurrence. Indeed, in subsequent days there were references from his book 'Centuries,' with juicy descriptions detailing accurate couplets referring specifically to the fall of twin towers; thus adding yet another landmark prediction made by Nostradamus after almost four centuries had passed.

Disparaging the accomplishments of an individual and elevating Naadi astrology as a superior and brilliant prognostication is merely a self-congratulatory endeavor by those who extol the virtues of India's rich traditions and ancient knowledge. This, undoubtedly, is the perception held by detractors of astrology - one that cannot be easily swayed. As such, I present to readers incontrovertible evidence for them to make an informed comparison between these two entities.

Before delving into this topic further, it would be prudent to provide a comprehensive explanation of Naadi palm leaf astrological predictions made by ancient Sages (Maharishis) as well as offer a brief introduction on Nostradamus.

An Introduction to Naadi Palm Leaf Astrology

Since ancient times, the Indian people have revered many great sages whom we call 'Maharishis'. These wise individuals are mentioned in epic works such as the Ramayana, Mahabharata, and Bhagvata. Though most of them have passed on from this world, some still possess recordings of their clairvoyant abilities which include a magical Naadi phenomenon. Among these enlightened beings are Vasistha, Agasthya, Vishwamitra, Bhrugu, Shukra, Narada and Kak-Bhujander; there were as many as 72 Maharishis who could visualise distant life events with clarity and recorded them in different languages so that they may be referred to whenever necessary.

Today these chronicles can only be found within Tamil Nadu where they are written on Palmyra trees. The predictions contained within these leaves are chemically processed for longevity and frequent usage. Known commonly as Naadi Granthas Predictions; each leaf is designated for one person alone.

Within each leaf you will find details regarding your parents' names along with the day and date of your birth according to the Tamil almanac planetary position and ascendant zodiac sign placement. Educational qualification levels along with present professions of employment are also noted alongside expected number of children.

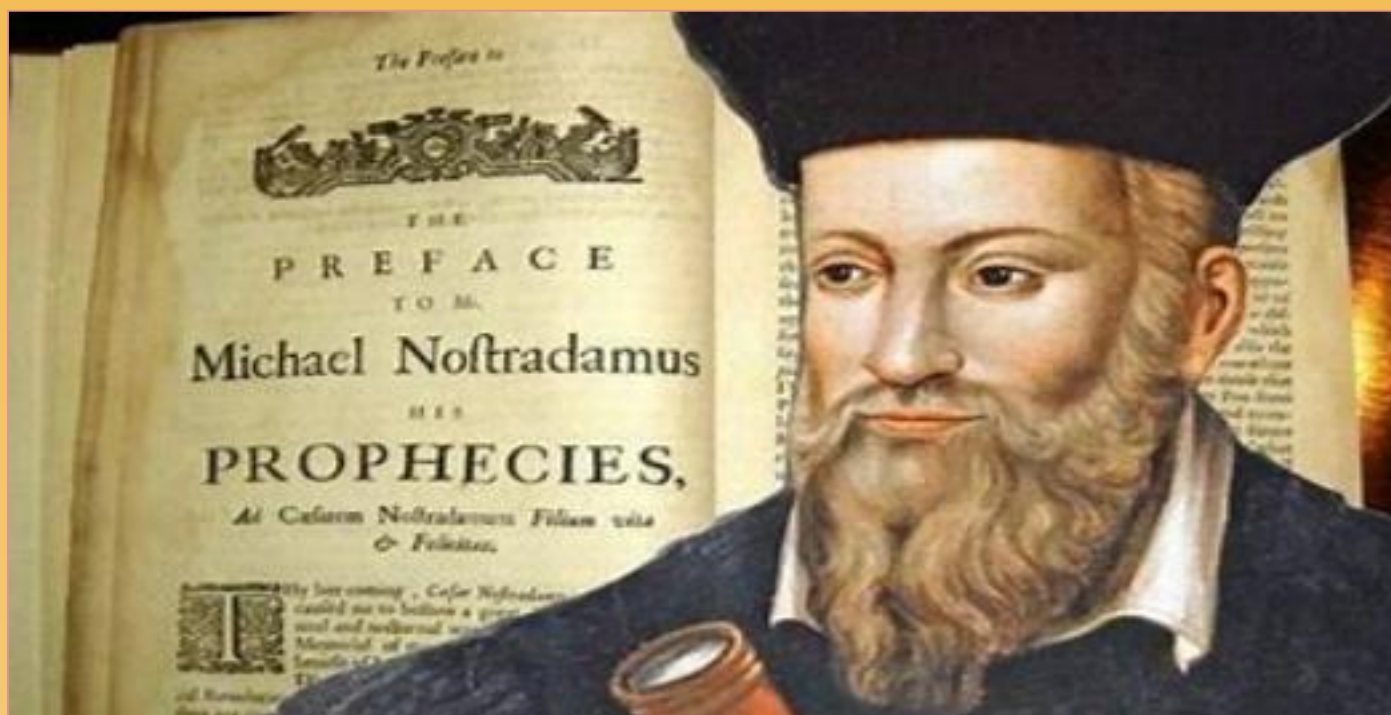

To identify an individual's exact leaf requires a unique method wherein right-hand thumb impressions for men or left-hand thumb impressions based upon fingerprints for women must be taken into consideration before conducting any searches through records containing thousands upon thousands of palm leaves.

Once an individual has confirmed that information pertaining to their description matches what was previously recorded on a specific palm leaf then everything contained therein shall be transcribed onto a 40-page booklet format for easier access at later dates when required.

Based on the notes recorded in the notebook, with the aid of translation, one can be informed of their predictions in any desired language. Typically, these predictions are conveyed in Hindi or other regional languages native to the area. To alleviate periods of distress, remedial measures are recommended for implementation. These may include visiting temples, providing alms to those in need, as well as offering food and water to those who hunger and thirst. In certain cases, a temple visit is required prior to conducting an actual reading! The suggested rituals must be performed accordingly. These divine manuscripts were written by Maharishis with a singular aim: to assist individuals during tough times and help them lead joyful lives so that their future journeys may proceed more smoothly and comfortably.

Introduction to Nostradamus

Nostradamus

Michel de Nostradamus, born on December 14, 1503 in Saint Remy, France, was the eldest of four siblings and the son of a farmer. He obtained a degree in medicine but became disillusioned after being unable to save his family members from an epidemic of plague. As a result, he relocated to another part of Europe.

During this time, he developed an interest in astrology and began having prophetic visions after secluding himself from society for some time. However, no one took notice until he stopped a countryman and greeted him as "His Holiness." Nineteen years later, that same person became the great-grand Pope - the sixth - in 1585. From then on, Nostradamus' reputation as a renowned soothsayer grew significantly.

Unfortunately for him though, his fellow medical practitioners and political figures were against his newfound fame and began to hate him. Despite this opposition however, Nostradamus published his first book titled 'Centuries', which contains ten chapters with each chapter containing one hundred stanzas or quadrangles that are meant to cover events up until year 3997.

To date hundreds of predictions made by Nostradamus have been proven true while others remain debatable. His books have been translated into many languages with sales reaching top charts making it quite profitable for those who converted his utterances into various languages or regions catering specifically towards their readership's tastes.

Some critics argue that many quadrangles were fabricated to suit particular events while adding words just so they could present their desired meaning; thus using the same four lines repeatedly for different occasions with little regard for accuracy or authenticity.

Despite these criticisms however there are still many people who find entertainment value in reading about these hilarious predictions even if they don't take them seriously themselves

Here is a comparison between Naadi Predictions and Nostradamus's utterances:

- 1) Age Disparity. The book 'Centuries' was written in the 16th century, making it less than 400 years old. There has been no noteworthy person in the western world who claimed to have written predictions except for him. Conversely, the tradition of writing Naadi Palm leaves by many Sages dates back more than 5000 years ago; hence, Naadi Predictions are much older than Nostradamus by multiple generations.
- 2) Foreign Origin. Notably, no outsider from India has ever recorded prophecies before or after him in poetic form as Nostradamus did. In contrast to that, several individuals contributed to divining the books of Naadi Granths in poetic form instead of being solely attributed to one singular MAHARISHI.
- 3) Unremarkable Persona. During his time, Nostradamus was not regarded as an extraordinary personality but rather taunted as Auliya (Whimsical person with some exceptional psychic powers), often experiencing spasm attacks where he obtained insights into future events expected to occur soon after. Gradually however his popularity began increasing due to startling prophecies turning true over time.

On the other hand, sages who visualized and drafted these prophecies were always given high respect and honor during their contemporary times as 'MAHARSHRI' both by kings and ordinary folks alike owing mainly due to their rigorous penance which developed them an ability towards understanding various dimensions of universal truth thus treated like Mahamanav - Great Souls deserving utmost reverence at any given point in time!

4) Fear of Mortality:

Nostradamus was plagued by a constant fear of his own mortality. He harbored equal concern for the prophecies he divulged, which were beyond his control or ability to cease. To circumvent direct confrontation with jealous rivals and colleagues, those in proximity began transcribing his expressions in such a way that no one could decipher their true meaning. Nostradamus composed cryptic and enigmatic messages, utilizing roopak-allegory and obscure phrases to describe people, places, and events. These phrases now serve as riddles for experts to unravel. In contrast, the Sages of Naadi Predictions never fretted over threats against their lives; they were highly safeguarded from human and natural disasters alike. The sages did not concern themselves with death; instead, they focused on preserving their knowledge within temple complexes along with their treasuries and libraries.

5) Puzzling Quatrains - Prophecies

Nostradamus preferred conveying future events or prophecies through coded couplets which allowed multiple interpretations to arise from a single stanza. This led to confusion amongst translators and publishers who sought to capitalize on its popularity wave by altering words or phrases for suitable meanings from the original texts- an example being Hitler's belief that according to Nostradamus' predictions he would be victorious in World War II despite facing defeat at times during the war itself! Thousands of pamphlets proclaiming this message were dropped onto allied forces demoralizing them further until it was revealed after the war ended that these quotes referred not towards Hitler but rather towards Allied victory instead.

In contrast, Maharishis avoided references regarding nations states or kingdoms when making predictions so as not incite rivalry amongst them while providing seekers individualized guidance through cryptic fonts used only for palm leaf writers' convenience without restricting creativity freedom whatsoever!

6) Creation of Singular Book

Nostradamus's unique book titled 'Centuries' comprises of 10 chapters, each consisting of 100 quatrains. Thus, in a total of 1000 quatrains, Nostradamus covered a period spanning almost 2300 years. His predictions encompassed an extensive range of world events across a vast time span and therefore could not predict the complete life story of any individual. It is noteworthy that even if we presume that one quatrain signifies one event (although it is not always the case as some single events were covered in multiple quatrains), no other author has written such books.

In contrast, according to present information, at least 72 Great Sages are believed to have written Naadi predictions - great compendiums catering to mankind for an unknown duration and extent. Millions have already attested to their accuracy while others are yet to experience them. Even the custodians of Palm leaves who read them do not fathom how long they will serve mankind!

7) Absence Of Person Names In Prophecies

Nostradamus's prophecies do not provide specific names but instead offer vague and confusing information which raises more questions than answers for readers seeking knowledge or understanding.

On the contrary, Naadi Predictions accurately reveal names relating to divination with astonishing precision engraved on palm leaves by readers themselves. For instance: Agasthya Maharishi stated with accuracy that my name was Shashikant; my second spouse's name was Alka and my expired wife's name was Chhaya; my father and mother's names were Janardan and Mangala respectively; my father had passed away; I am presently serving in central government service related to national defense particularly dealing with vehicles capable of high-speed space travel equipped with firepower against enemy forces.

8) Searching Descriptions After Events Occur

With Nostradamus's prophecy texts, it is commonly observed that after an event takes place frantic searches are conducted by enthusiasts looking for corresponding quatrains projecting connections between prophecies and events.

However, in Naadi Predictions only twenty-two stanzas draw up an individual's life sketch covering twelve aspects indicated through horoscopes including all major highlights indicating particular details about every occurrence without searching references after incidents occur.

9) Lack Of Compassion

Although Nostradamus intended his prophesies as warnings regarding impending catastrophes befalling humanity he did so without compassion (Paropkara). As such his predictions may appear more like entertainment rather than serious matters deserving concern.

10) Remedial Measures Not Suggested

No remedial measures were suggested by Nostradamus mitigating or avoiding ill-effects arising from predicted occurrences.

In contrast however Naadi Maharishis consistently come out with divine remedies (Daivi Upaaya). Experience shows performing these actions can positively affect outcomes sometimes averting potential disasters altogether or minimizing harm done similar precautions taken during rainfall using umbrellas protecting individuals from raindrops despite having no control over weather conditions.

11) Risk Of Bogus Leaf Prediction Nil

Lovers of Nostradamus often attempt compiling verses adding words suitable for reader preferences depending upon country religion region etc., thus making prophetic utterances genuine via publishers' manipulations exposed numerous times unmasking its hollowness trickery etc...

On the other hand seekers scour through countless palm leaf pages until finding ones precisely tallying small details convinced beyond doubt once found request reader reads exact same leaf presented thereby eliminating possibility bogus incorrect readings being forced upon them

12) Evidence Provided On Hand

Once exact leaf found content noted cryptic Tamil language notebook transcription made into cassette/CD then handed over seeker if Naadi Reader wants cheat won't give anything putting him trouble! Polite requests permit taking photographs video shoots close-ups allowed given evidence palm leaf available whereas no facilities exist providing such services when referring Nostradamian Prophecies

Conclusion:

From above description one can understand why I believe Naadi Maharishi work constitutes mind-boggling miracles far superior quality compared alongside those produced by Nostradamous... However behind this Frenchman's popularity lies European Christian White Supremacy exposure granted print electronic media respect commanded centuries past among reasons contributing towards today's status quo... Conversely Indians remain largely unaware treasure ancient wisdom held within refusing acknowledge ancestral glory greatness...Some take pride denouncing naivete superstition gullibility associated traditions rationalists scientists leading charge debunking art divination hoax etc.. hoping gain reputation forward-looking pro-scientific temperament personalities! Yet urge all refrain falling prey malicious propaganda instead reading letters received from ancient sages whether believing authenticity irrelevant merely appreciate receiving personal letter thanking maharishis offering glimpse rich cultural heritage left behind ancestors

Shiva Parvati

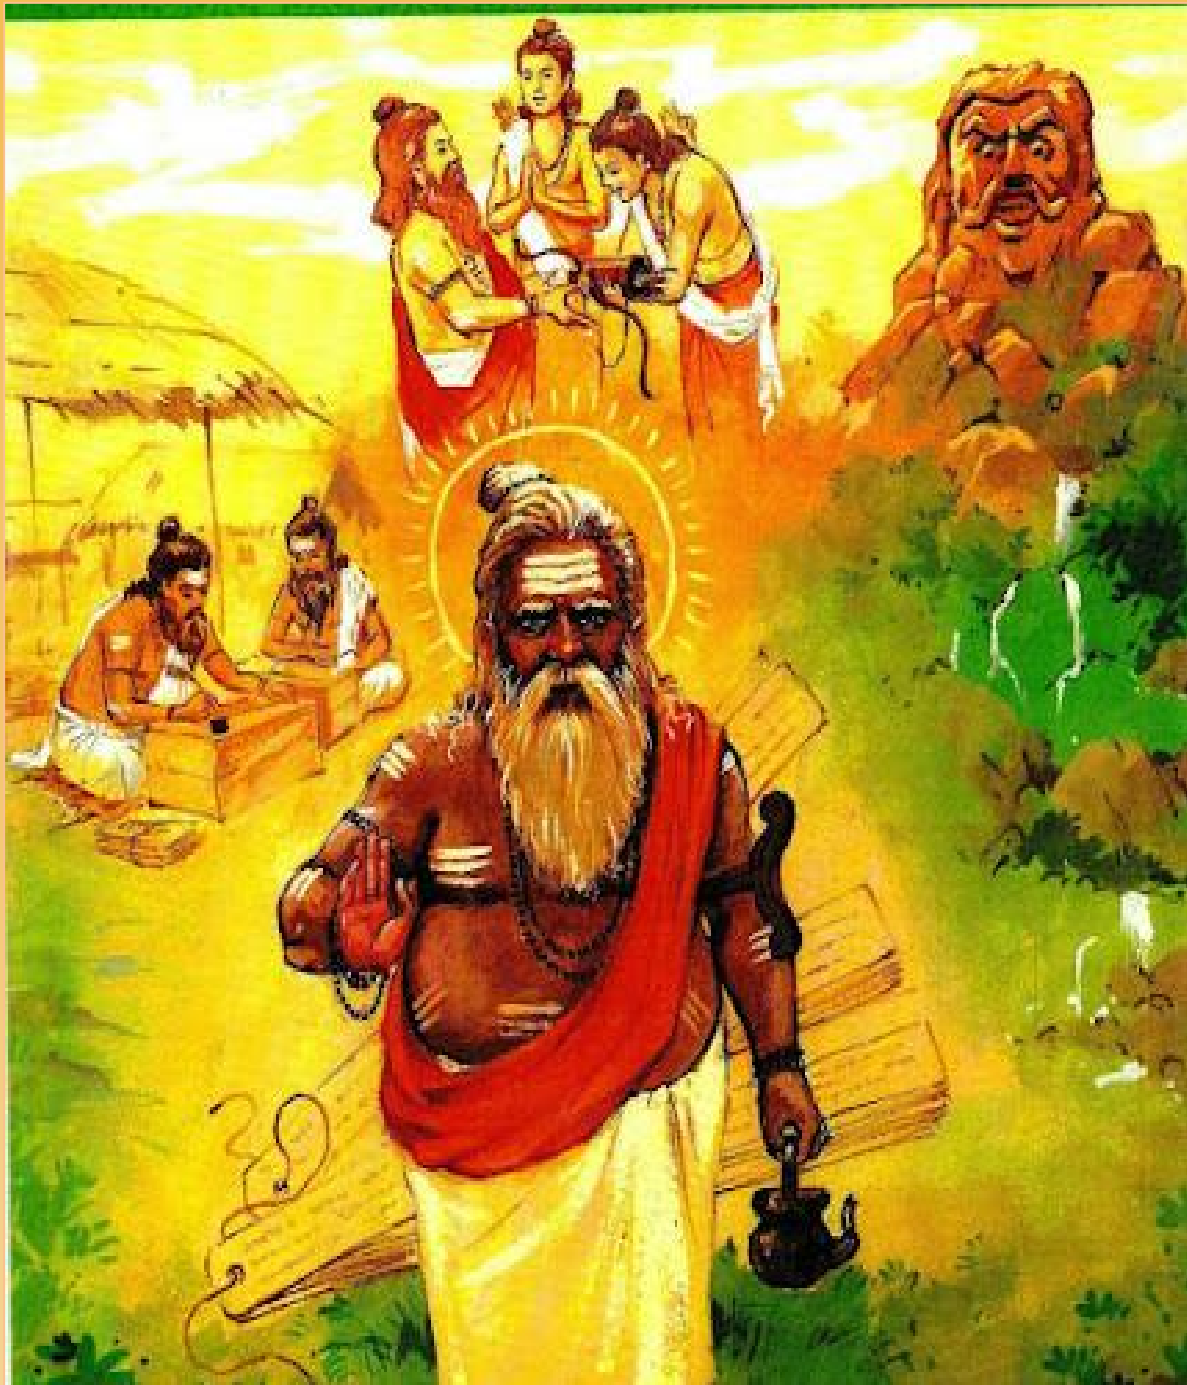

The Saptarshees, a group of seven revered sages, invoke Lord Shiva and Parvati to endow them with the ability to divine the predictions of worthy souls on the majestic Himalayan peak known as Kailash.

We believe that the Naadi Predictions hold the key to unlocking our future and guiding us towards our destiny. Through this ancient practice, we seek answers to life's most pressing questions and gain insight into the path that lies ahead. With each prediction, we are humbled by the power of the divine and grateful for the opportunity to receive its guidance. We bow down in reverence and gratitude, knowing that through Naadi

Predictions, we can find the clarity and direction we need to navigate life's journey with confidence and purpose.

Maharishi Agasthya life events

Bhagwan Maharishi Agasthya is a multifaceted personality. Resolute expression on his face explains his firm contribution to the humanity. He created and nurtured Tamil language. He had rendered commentaries on many subjects like Philosophy, Theology, weaponry, martial arts. He greatly contributed in etching out Naadi Predictions on leaves of palm trees, which were available in abundance in arid land of Tamilnadu. With divine vision he, along with host of others had developed the art of foretelling the events to deserving seekers. The theory of Karma – retribution and rebirth are bases on which they structured the predictions with 100% precession. It is and will be rendering service to future mankind.

Agasthya was a great worrier too. He developed marshal art called, 'Varma kalleia'. When he crossed mount Vindhya, he devised methods to extract iron, copper and other minerals from ores of Dandakaranya. He developed and, produced military weapons and techniques of effectively using them.

Later he handed over many of the weapons to Lord Rama which proved to be very effective in destroying the Demon King Ravana. He is also credited with civil engineering marvels and diverting the courses of rivers of Kaveri, Tamraparni for better utilization of water resources for farming and drinking.

In this painting behind his portrait actions like writing of literature in Tamil on palm leaves, handing over very advanced weapons in his Ashram near Nashik, His legendry march to cross the Vindhya range of mountains, channeling the course of river Kaveri and waterfall at Kutralam are depicted to unfold his life achievements.

Maharishi Atri and Mother Anasooya in the Gurukulam guiding the soul seeking Jeeva Naadi

Maharishi Atri, seated beneath the sacred Peepal tree, provides guidance to the soul. Accompanying him is Mother Anasooya, who weaves a garland of flowers while attentively listening to Maharishi's words of wisdom in response to the soul's inquiries. The presence of two deer symbolizes the attentive and faithful listener versus one with a fickle mind. One deer listens intently while the other appears distracted. Additionally, a cow gazes upon them compassionately. The water tank represents divine knowledge and the water pot indicates that Maharishi's divination comes with consent and inspiration from God.

Sadly, there are those who take pride in interrupting good deeds and harassing do-gooders; they are represented here as rabbits whose greed for personal contentment distracts them from virtuous pursuits. Lord Shiva and Mother-Shakti observe these happenings through their avian forms as a pair of parrots.

In this serene setting of Gurukulam (an ancient Indian learning center), some disciples engage in writing Naadi Granthas (sacred texts) while others arrange them systematically. Lord Dattatreya bestows his blessings upon us self-proclaimed volunteers of Naadi Granthas amidst this peaceful atmosphere.

Ashram of Maharishi Bhrigu and Maharishi Shukra

Maharishi Bhrigu is considered the top rishi in the 'Shrimad Bhagwat Geeta' (Chapter 10 verse 25). He is known for his principles of Astrological combinations and his predictions, known as 'Bhrigu Phal', are popularly referred to as Bhrigu Samhita in Hoshiarpur, a district in the state of Punjab, Northern India. He also wrote Bhrigu Naadi in Tamil language, which contains predictions written on handmade paper. The pattern followed is different from South Indian predictions on palm leaves. In one discussion, Maharishi Bhrigu talks about the fate of a seeker with his disciple Maharishi Shukra.

In a portrait, Maharishi Bhrigu's disciples are seated in a semi-circle, trying to understand the complexities of one's Karmas.

Guru Bhrigu tells the seekers that it is compassion that has led them to show the path to overcome difficult times in a common man's life struggle. He believes that if they don't guide people, then who else will?

In the early morning, the ashram atmosphere is full of happiness and enthusiasm. The red-colored carpet 'Rangoli' design drawn by some ladies of the Ashram with colored powder sets the mood of learning. Other students are engaged in cattle feeding, cleaning the surroundings, etc. A pair of peacocks sitting on a branch observe the proceedings with interest. On another branch, Shiva and Parvati in the form of a pair of lovebirds bless the present ones.
